Dear Ralph

There is a book that you just must read since you are "into" computers. It is MEGATRENDS by John Naisbitt.

The author traces the impact on people of the high-tech society brought about by the growing use of computers. He also describes the trend toward the offsetting high-touch society that is developing to help us cope with the many changes (not all positive) the computer has brought into our lives.

The book is at the same time frightening and reassuring. Do read it; then let's compare notes.

Dear Della

The TV people are very unhappy with you. Since I received the trivia game for my birthday, the "pursuit" begins as soon as dinner is over and the TV is OFF. My entire family sends its thanks.

I need one of those "trivia facts" books, though. I play so poorly that I have been nicked N. T. for "No Trivia."

Thanks, Della, for helping us learn to play together again. I didn't know mom and dad were so smart.

Cordially,

Nelson
